

How To Help Your Cat Stress Less At The Vet

-Brought to you by the Small Animal General Practitioners Club at OSU CVM-

1. Keep your cat in a carrier!

Placing a blanket or towel over the carrier can also help to keep them calm

2. Associate positive factors with going to the vet

Offer treats and small bits of food to your food driven cat. Offering and placing toys inside the carrier can also help

3. Make sure you as the owner are also calm

Speaking to your cat in a soft tone and making sure your actions do not startle your cat

4. See if waiting in your car before your appointment is an option

This keeps your pet away from any smells or other animals that may cause them stress

5. If all of these options do not help then consult your veterinarian

There may be an over-the-counter medication or prescription that can be given prior to pet visits
